Launchy is an application launcher for Windows operating systems developed by the Lunatic Fringe. Launchy is a replacement for the popular shell script called "locate", "whereis", and "which" in Windows environments. These tools are commonly used to search the directories for files that match a search expression. Launchy extends the functionality of these tools with advanced search features. It can search for files or programs installed on the computer, search for files or programs on a web server, or launch a program on the command line. These advanced search features can be found in the section of the manual titled Advanced Searching. The settings for the application are stored in the registry. The user can change the settings from within the application or even change them for individual users from the System tools page. For more information about the Registry, please refer to the Registry User's Guide. Create customizable keyboard macros that can be saved to define hotkeys. Keyboard macros automate common functions, such as copying and pasting text from one application to another, or copying a URL from a browser into a web form. Macros can be applied to any combination of keys including mouse button clicks, mouse movements and scroll wheel movements. Keyboard macros can be created or modified in any installed application and then pasted directly into the KeyMacro window. KeyMacro will create a hotkey for each macro and assign an optional hotkey modifier to activate the hotkey. Using a keyboard shortcut, you can invoke your macros without needing to navigate to the KeyMacro window. Activating the hotkey modifier is not required to use the macro or to invoke the hotkey. Compatible with most PC keyboards Keyboard macros are a great way to quickly and easily perform tasks that are too time consuming to do manually. Pro Features: ● Create and delete macros as you need them. ● Macro logic is configurable and you can assign hotkeys for any of the macro's actions. ● All macros are saved automatically to disk with a special configuration file. ● The macros are read by the popular MS Windows programs and can be created from almost any text box. ● You can define the hotkey modifiers that trigger the hotkeys for your macros. ● Macro logic is configurable and you can assign hotkeys for any of the macro's actions. ● All macros are saved automatically to disk with a special configuration file. ● The macros are read by the popular MS Windows programs and can be created from almost any text box. ● You can define the hotkey modifiers that trigger the hotkeys for your macros. ● You can assign a hotkey modifier to a macro.
